

Rivaldo, the 'friendly' wild tusker who chose freedom over captivity, dies at 45

Arun Janardhanan
Chennai, February 13

Last September, Rivaldo was injured in a clash with another tusker and had grown thinner and weaker. COURTESY: NA NASEER

RIVALDO, THE unusually gentle wild elephant who roamed the Vazhathottam and Mavanallah forests of the Mudumalai Tiger Reserve and became a symbol of the fraught debate between captivity and freedom in Tamil Nadu's Nilgiris, died on Friday morning. It was around 45.

Rewilded in June 2021 after three months in captivity and long known for its calm proximity to humans along the Sigur river corridor, Rivaldo largely remained within its familiar landscape near Bokkapuram and Vazhathottam, returning there even after months of disappearance.

One man knew the tusker better than most. In a photo capturing their camaraderie, the man held out a hand, not in command but in conversation, beneath a tiled roof at Cheetal Walk — his residence in the Nilgiris. The man was late Mark Davidar, a conservationist.

Rivaldo was not Brazilian, nor a football star. But like the midfielder it was named after, the elephant inspired fierce loyalty. For nearly three decades, Rivaldo moved through the forests along the Sigur river and the Mudumalai Tiger Reserve, sometimes close enough to homes that people forgot it was wild, sometimes vanishing into the teak and bamboo for months at a time. Its death on Friday, according to local forest guards who spoke to The Indian Express, was after a final, frail return to the landscape that had shaped its life.

"He was released in 2021; he got a bit frightened of people after that captivity episode. He went back to the wild," said Priya Davidar, an ecologist, former professor at Pondicherry University, and Mark's sister.

"He was really a gentle, intelligent elephant. People used to throw things at him, but he still retained his gentleness. In 2020, a group lobbied for his captivity, and there was a successful counter campaign," she recalled on Friday afternoon.

Rivaldo's story is inseparable from the Davidars — a family synonymous with conservation in the Nilgiris. Mark, who died in 2013 at 56, had lived for a quarter century in Masinagudi, running the Sigur Nature Trust to protect elephant corridors. His home, Cheetal Walk, became something of a pilgrimage site. Wild elephants, drawn by salt, water and occasionally food left behind, wandered in and out of its clearing.

Mark named the young male tuskers after his favourite Brazilian footballers: Roberto Carlos, Ronaldo, Kaka, Cafu, and Rivaldo. "Many more Brazilians are still roaming around here," Priya said.

Rivaldo lost a sizable portion of its trunk in 2013, likely to poachers. Mark ensured it was treated. Later, in 2015, when it was wounded again by a wild tusker, forest department teams intervened once more. The elephant became known for its unusual ease around humans and would linger near Cheetal Walk, waiting.

But proximity is a fragile thing in the wild. By 2020, Rivaldo's habit of entering residential areas — including a gated community built on a disputed elephant corridor — had made it controversial. Some fed the animal, others feared it. Petitions were filed seeking its capture, citing health concerns. The Madras High Court rejected one such plea in 2021, remarking that while the "laws of nature may be cruel," animals are "best left in the wild."

Rovaldo had already been taken into custody once that year, led into a kraal near Vazhathottam for medical treatment after difficulty eating because of an old trunk injury. It spent nearly 90 days in captivity before being released in August 2021 — the first case in India of an elephant kept for three months and then rewilded.

A senior government official later said it was Menaka Gandhi who intervened with Chief Minister M K Stalin soon after he took office in 2021, helping secure Rivaldo's freedom.

Once freed, it wore a radio collar and roamed 30 to 40 kilometres a day. Camera traps in December 2025 captured it near Bokkapuram after it had been missing for 48 days, prompting rumours that it had died. Officials said the animal likely wandered into Kerala and Karnataka before returning. "Wild elephants often move across landscapes before settling back," a senior forest official from Mudumalai said.

Yet something had shifted. After captivity, Priya said Rivaldo was different.

In a first, IAF instructors to train Royal Air Force pilots

Amrita Nayak Dutta
New Delhi, February 13

FOR THE first time, Indian Air Force instructors will impart training to British pilots at the Royal Air Force (RAF) Valley in the UK.

According to a statement from the British High Commission, the decision in this regard was taken at the 19th UK-India Air Staff Talks in New Delhi on Thursday, where both countries have agreed to further enhance military training engagements.

Under the latest agreement, the Indian Air Force (IAF) will deploy three Qualified Flight Instructors (QFI) to Royal Air Force (RAF) Valley — the training base for British fast jet pilots, the statement noted.

Doordarshan News' voice of grace passes away at 71

Suanshu Khurana
New Delhi, February 13

Sarla Maheshwari

BEFORE THE arrival of ticker tapes and the cacophony of competing talking heads, there was the near-sacrosanct ritual of the Doordarshan news bulletin. And within its simple, unadorned frame was Sarla Maheshwari.

Draped in her reverse-pallu Gujarati sari, straight pleats and border firmly across her shoulder, Maheshwari entered the nation's living rooms with restraint, dignity and a measured authority to present the day's news in Hindi.

Delhi-based Maheshwari, remembered for her composure and graceful news delivery in the days when Doordarshan was the only news channel, passed away on Thursday due to kidney failure. She was 71. She has been living on dialysis for quite some time.

Maheshwari is survived by her husband and gastroentero-logist, Dr Pawan Maheshwari, her two sons and their families.

Her friend and former colleague, Shammi Narang, who would often present news with her, recalls how he was quite nervous when he joined Doordarshan in 1983. Maheshwari was his senior then. To perfect his presentation, an editor asked him to spend some time with Maheshwari, who, says Narang, "had exquisite language, diction, grace and composure" at a time when live news broadcasts were done without teleprompters.
