

Low-risk cervical cancer can safely be treated with a less radical operation than what patients have generally undergone, according to results from a 700-patient trial. The incidence of pelvic recurrence of cancer at 3 years was 2.17% in radical hysterectomy group and 2.52% in simple hysterectomy group, according to a report published in The New England Journal of Medicine

KAVITA BAJELI-DATT @ New Delhi

RAMESH Kumar, 30, has a family history of colon cancer as he had lost his father to it. So, when Rakesh had recurrent constipation followed by loose stools, his world crashed when a growth was detected and a biopsy confirmed cancer. After undergoing surgery, followed by radiation and then chemotherapy, he is cancer-free today. But he never thought, even in his wildest dreams, that he would get colon cancer at this young age – even though he had a family history – as it is said to predominantly affect older individuals, with the majority of cases occurring in people aged 50 and above. But it is not so anymore.

“Lately, colon cancer incidence and death rates have fallen for individuals older than 50 years with an increase in screening tests like colonoscopy. However, the opposite is true for individuals younger than 50,” said Dr Pragya Shukla, head of oncology at Delhi State Cancer Institute (DSCI).

Highlighting the fact that colon cancer cases in India are seeing a sudden rise, Dr Amanjeet Singh, director and head of colorectal surgery, gastro-intestinal (GI) surgery, GI oncology and bariatric surgery, gastrosciences, Medanta, said although colorectal cancer has long been associated with older age groups, there is a concerning trend emerging in India as an increasing number of cases being diagnosed among younger individuals, including Millennial and Gen Z.

“We are seeing more and more young people below 40 years in our hospital, and the concerning part is that they are being detected at the end stage of cancer. Some of these cases also include young teens below 20 years of age,” he said. “This shift in demographics underscores the complex interplay of genetic predisposition and environmental factors contributing to the development of colorectal cancer,” he added. He said that there are various reasons for this rise – one is Covid-19, which hindered people from visiting hospitals to get themselves screened on time for colon cancer, while the other is lifestyle changes and genetic predispositions.

According to Globocan 2020, colon cancer – a type of cancer that starts in the large intestine (colon) or rectum – is ranked fourth in incidence and fifth in mortality in the world. In India, colon cancer, also known as colorectal cancer, ranks thirteenth in incidence as well as mortality. Colon cancer typically begins as small, noncancerous clumps of cells called polyps, which eventually develops into cancer if not detected and removed early.

Stressing that, unlike western countries, Indians get colorectal cancer at a younger age, Dr Sandeep Nayak P, director, department of surgical oncology and robotic and laparoscopic surgery, Fortis Hospital, Bannerghatta Road, Bengaluru, said several factors may increase one’s risk of colon cancer. Apart from age, personal and family history of colorectal cancer or polyps, other reasons include inflammatory intestinal conditions, inherited syndromes that increase colon cancer risk, red meat, sedentary lifestyle, diabetes, obesity, smoking, alcohol and radiation therapy for cancer.

INCIDENCE OF COLON CANCER IN YOUTH ON THE RISE

“Colon cancer is more likely to go undetected as the condition typically has no symptoms, if at all, in its early stages,” said Dr Arun Kumar Giri, director of surgical oncology, Aakash Healthcare, New Delhi.

“When they do appear, symptoms vary in different individuals depending on the location in the intestine and size of the tumour. Weakness or fatigue, anaemia, unexplained weight loss along with changes in your bowel habits, abdominal discomfort and blood in your stool or from the rectum are some of the common symptoms of cancer of the colon. If any of the symptoms persist, it’s time to see a doctor,” he said.

Dr Shukla said that individuals with any of the colorectal cancer risk factors should start screening at an earlier age. Colon cancer treatment and even its detection have seen significant advancements in India.

RISK FACTORS

- Family history of colorectal cancer
- Genetic conditions such as Lynch syndrome and familial adenomatous polyposis
- Age
- Personal history
- Lifestyle factors such as a diet high in processed meats and low in fruits and vegetables, sedentary behaviour, obesity, smoking and excessive alcohol consumption

SYMPTOMS

- Changes in bowel habits, such as constipation, diarrhoea or stool narrowing
- Blood on the stool, either dark and tar-like or bright red
- Bloating, cramping or pain in the abdomen
- Abrupt, unexplained weight loss
- Iron deficiency anaemia from chronic bleeding, which causes weakness, fatigue and paleness

Vaccinate kids to lower risk of respiratory infections

RISHITA KHANNA @ Bengaluru

As the prevalence of common respiratory issues in children is on the rise, experts are emphasising the importance of preventive measures and advanced treatments. The most common respiratory diseases affecting children include asthma, characterised by symptoms like wheezing, shortness of breath, and chest tightness, often accompanied by fever if triggered by an infection. “A child’s vulnerability to respiratory illnesses is influenced by genetics and environmental exposures. A family history of conditions like asthma increases risk, while exposure to tobacco smoke, air pollution, allergens, and indoor mould can irritate and inflame young lungs. Premature birth and low birth weight are also significant risk factors due to underdeveloped lungs and weaker immune systems, respectively,” Dr Narayanaswamy, paediatrician and founder of Athreya Hospital in Bengaluru said.

XPLAINER

Symptoms of respiratory illnesses

- Bronchiolitis, prevalent in infants, presents with symptoms such as wheezing, coughing, rapid and difficult breathing
- Pneumonia manifests with symptoms like fever with chills, cough, rapid breathing, chest pain and fatigue
- Croup typically involves a barking cough, hoarseness, and difficulty breathing
- Flu exhibits sudden onset of fever or chills, cough, sore throat, runny nose, body aches, headaches, and possibly vomiting and diarrhoea in some children
- Respiratory Syncytial Virus infection, common in infants and young children, shares symptoms akin to a cold.

As a preventive measure, children should be vaccinated to significantly lower the risk of contracting the diseases, Dr Narayanaswamy said.
